Health Equity and Social Justice: The Role of the Perinatal Quality Collaborative (PQC)

Jaime Cabrera is an accomplished executive who has worked for over 20 years in health care operations and information systems.

Jaime has extensive experience in strategic planning, business development, resource management, operations, and finance.

She earned her Master of Public Health in Management and Policy from the University of California Los Angeles and her undergraduate degree from the University of Pittsburgh.

As the Executive Director of the Colorado Perinatal Care Quality Collaborative (CPCQC), Jaime leads efforts to advance the mission of improving the health of pregnant and postpartum individuals, infants, and their families in Colorado.

She collaborates across sectors to influence clinical practice, public policy, and community supports that bolster the physical and mental health of birthing individuals and their families.
